For the first time in history, men in positions of power - especially two men - knew that if either side made a single wrong decision they might destroy civilization.